Sant Martí de Nagol church

Sant Martí de Nagol's path

This route has moderate difficulty and not much climb. It starts in the very north of Sant Julià de Lòria and zigzags up to the village of Nagol, parallel to the left-hand bank of the river. There are some sections at the start of the route when the path is cobbled and has a protective wall separating it from the farmland. In the village of Nagol, the path joins with another that goes to Sant Martí church. It allows access to multiple terraces on either side.

Sant Martí de Nagol church is known for its Romanesque paintings. It comprises a rectangular nave, a wooden roof and a semicircular apse.

The parish of Sant Julià de Lòria is the most southerly in the Principality of Andorra. To the north and north-east, it borders with the parishes of Andorra la Vella and Escaldes-Engordany. To the east, south and west, it borders Catalonia. The main rivers in the parish are, from north to south, the Llumeneres, the Aixirivall and the Auvinyà. To the extreme north are the rivers Certers and Nagol, and to the south the Juberri.
